

CONSPIRACY FACE "CRAP" GAME PROBE

Dice Game for Real Money in Courtroom Likely to Lead to Inquiry.

POLITICIANS ARE EXCITED

Politicians about City Hall and court officials in the county court house discussed with much animation, today, the "crap" game that was "pulled off" yesterday in the first session of the Superior Court by a dozen of the city's gamblers.

An real money was won and lost on the game that on the first night the members of the city government pulled the dice, but after the court room where the game was played in session investigating the alleged bribery in connection with the big loan measure, it was whispered that another investigation might be started.

The conclusion was at the court house waiting, as it is in the grand jury room, to be pulled in the grand jury room. At the same time, the city is in the hands of the grand jury.

At the same time, the city is in the hands of the grand jury. The grand jury is in the hands of the city.

Produce the Dice.

Then one of the members produced a set of dice. He rolled them, and the other members of the grand jury rolled them.

SLAYS BLACK LAND DOWN

BATTLE FOR LIFE

PRISONER TELLS PROVIDENCE POLICE OF A MURDEROUS ATTACK IN HIS HOME.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 10.—Shaking off the grip of the Black Hand slayer who is believed to have traveled across the continent to kill him, Andrew Atkinson, 25 years of age, of No. 20 Plimouth street, North End, told his assistant to death early today at Atkinson's home.

Atkinson, a 25-year-old, was taken to the hospital, where he was killed by a bullet in the chest, and he was taken to the hospital, where he was killed by a bullet in the chest.

The Country
Does NOT Want
HUMBLE Labor

Humble Men Belong in Asia, to Perish, IN THE PAST, NOT HERE
Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

All that is excellent, but the good archbishop says also: "The deed of the day is honest, patient, HUMBLE LABOR." With that we do not agree at all. The world has seen enough of HUMBLE labor. This is a REPUBLIC; its rule extends to the Philippine Islands, and men there should be encouraged to feel as they do here. There is no reason why labor should be any more "humble" than the capital that employs it. As a matter of fact, the employing capital needs advice about humility far more than labor.

Labor should be independent, self-respecting. It should consider and respect the rights of others, and demand respect for its own rights. The workman who gives a day of labor should consider himself just exactly the same in the nation as the other man in the nation who pays him for the day of labor.

His work SHOULD be honest. It should also be patient, but the patience should not extend to the enduring of injustice.

For a good many thousand years human beings have had preached to them their duty to be HUMBLE. The poor serfs were humble, when all that they earned was taken from them. The miserable slaves were humble; the menials in Russia with the knout over their backs are humble. This country was established chiefly to MAKE IT POSSIBLE FOR MEN TO LIVE FREE FROM THIS SHAMEFUL HUMILITY.

America and the rest of the world need VIGOROUS WORKERS, independent workers, honest workers, self-respecting workers. But there is no reason for the worker to be any more HUMBLE than the man he works for.

If he earns what he gets, the score is even. If he earns more than he gets, the humility should be on the side of the man who takes more than he gives.

Independence, manliness, self-assertion, these are the qualities for the worker. The day for humility and cowering has gone by. Workmen want their reward now and here. They want decent pay, decent rest and decent education. AND THEY ARE GOING TO HAVE THOSE THINGS.

They have heard ENOUGH about humbleness.

prostituted, and seek for a chance to earn an honest living, if they were at all sensitive to public opinion.

Unfortunately, the Highway Commissioners appear to be more anxious to win the approval of the telephone managers than of the PUBLIC, whose servants they are supposed to be.

Whether they have prevented an honest inquiry because of their desire to help the trust or because of their desire to shield the politicians who have been corrupted by the trust is of secondary interest. There are politicians, and brothers and cousins of politicians, all over Greater Boston, who were trembling every day when the telephone "investigation" was being held, for fear the public would learn about the bribes they had taken.

The commissioners aided the trust, suppressed the evidence against it, and saved the public officials whose names are carried on its payrolls and free lists from being exposed to the light.

Instead of trying to find out how much of the money exacted from the public by a monopoly was spent in corrupting public officials, the commissioners did the very opposite thing. THEY SHIELDED THE GRATIFIERS.

If the Highway Commissioners had any sense of decency, they would resign. If they won't resign, they should be put out of office.

If Governor Guild will not put them out, a Governor should be elected who WILL put them out.

Is Boston Corrupt,
Like San Francisco?

Its City Councilmen Seem Anxious to Make the Public Think So.
Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

Another scandalous exhibition of an official attempt to hide public corruption took place yesterday in the County Court House.

Members of the Boston Common Council, summoned to tell what they knew about certain stories of bribery that have been current for some time, appeared at the office of the District Attorney, and by common consent REFUSED to give the information in their possession to the county official who is charged with the punishment of crime.

These men, instead of acting like officials selected by the people to administer their government, acted like men who were seeking to PREVENT the enforcement of the law.

A band of crooks summoned by the police for the purpose of tracing crime would have acted exactly as a majority of the Common Councilmen acted yesterday when they appeared in the District Attorney's office and DECLINED TO GIVE HIM INFORMATION.

Such action might have been expected in New York at the time of the "Jake" Sharp boodle scandal, or in St. Louis at the investigation into public corruption conducted by District Attorney Folk, or in San Francisco at the recent exploration of municipal graft, but it was hardly to be expected in a city like Boston.

Is it true that Boston's City Hall is a hotbed of corruption such as St. Louis recently had, and as San Francisco is now wending out?

Are the amazing stories of municipal "graft" that have been going the rounds in Boston TRUE?

WAS the recent enormous appropriation of the people's money put through by BRIBERY?

The action of the Councilmen yesterday in refusing to help the District Attorney arouses the suspicion that SOME of these stories, at least, are true.

TAFT, KING OF THE SLACK WIRE

Guess!

By Wex Jones

I was a shaded piazza. The moon was shining in the sky and the orchestra was softly playing "Love Me and Your Own is Mine."

"Darling," said Gerald Smythe to the lovely Marianne Howme, I love you. Will you be mine?"

Marianne cast her eyes to the ground. Then, not wishing to waste two good eyes, she lifted them again.

"I have little money, sweetheart," continued Gerald, "but my heart is true to you. I think of you when you eat your breakfast, when I wear whatever I am doing. Say you will be my own puppy-doggy."

Marianne rolled her eyes, and then, as they should keep on rolling, fixed them on Gerald.

"Gerald," she said, "it will let you know to-morrow. I will send you a note."

At four later Marianne was on the same piazza with another man.

"Marianne," said William Chappie, "I would like to make you my wife. I've got money to burn, and you can have anything you want."

"William," answered Marianne, "will let you know to-morrow. I will send you a note."

Next day Marianne sat at her writing desk.

"Gerald's a dear boy," she mused. "We've had a perfectly splendid time together this Summer, and I'm sure we should get along, and wouldn't the other girls be jealous?"

She wrote: "Dearest—Come this afternoon. I have a little word to whisper to you, and it's got more than two letters. Marianne."

She put the letter in an envelope and sealed it.

"What a lot of money Mr. Chappie has," she thought to herself. And then she addressed the letter to—

"POOR!" said James Black. "Tooth! No sensible man believes in ghosts."

"Then you won't mind the haunting room," said his host. "But ever since one of my ancestors killed his brother there in a quarrel—the brother was a Tory and wanted to cut out for the King—people say it's been haunted. One or two have declared they saw a shadowy form in a red coat."

"Deposition of one or two is all right," said his host. "Mine is sound and I'll warrant see no man in a red coat, and if I do I'll not scare old me."

"Now that old James Black has gone to bed," said young Harry Vane late, "let's fix him up a fright. I'll bet he'll sleep for all of his talk."

After midnight young Vane, clad in white sheet and a red suit made of an old curtain, slipped into Black's room and began slowly to pull the bedclothes toward the foot of the bed. In a moment there came a rattle, and two figures burst from the room, one madly chasing the other.

The one in front was—

Love's Way
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

LOVE gives us copious potions of delight.

Of pain and ecstasy, and peace and care.

Love leads us upward to the mountain height
And, like an Angel, stands beside us there.

Then thrusts us, demon like, in some abyss.
Where, in the darkness of despair we grope.

Till, suddenly, Love greets us with a kine,
And guides us back to flowery fields of hope.

LOVE makes all wisdom seem but pocket folly.
And yet the simplest mind with love grows wise;

The gayest heart he teaches melancholy,
Yet glorifies the erstwhile brooding eyes.

Love lives on change, and yet at change Love mocks.
For Love's whole life is one great paradox.

LOVE makes all wisdom seem but pocket folly.
And yet the simplest mind with love grows wise;

The gayest heart he teaches melancholy,
Yet glorifies the erstwhile brooding eyes.

Love lives on change, and yet at change Love mocks.
For Love's whole life is one great paradox.

LOVE makes all wisdom seem but pocket folly.
And yet the simplest mind with love grows wise;

The gayest heart he teaches melancholy,
Yet glorifies the erstwhile brooding eyes.
